Annotated Bibliography Addendum

December 1

For this assignment, return to search mode and seek out additional references that may be relevant to your research area and proposal. The good news is that, you may have actually already done this as a natural consequence of working on your proposal!

Document these references by adding entries for them to your annotated bibliography. Apply the same categories of summary, place, what's missing, and your contributions to these entries. Provide at least two (2) new entries, indicating that they are new with an asterisk (*). There is no maximum limit, however—if you want to log more than two new sources, then great!

This assignment reflects the reality of scholarly work that you never really stop building your annotated bibliography. Even as you work on one project, you will learn of new references or sources in your discipline—and you will want to keep up. Seeking out and reviewing related work by your colleagues is a habit, not a milestone.
